PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO DIETRICH SCHOOL GOVERNANCE DOCUMENTS

1. Whereas, The full-time non-tenure stream faculty play a central and highly valued role in delivering undergraduate education, one of our core missions, and under the University Bylaws should be voting members of the Dietrich School faculty;

Resolved, That Sections II.1 and II.2 of the Dietrich School Bylaws be amended to include full-time non-tenure stream in the voting faculty and to remove them from the list of Persons Excluded as detailed in the Attachment.

2. Whereas, Inclusion of full time non-tenure stream faculty in the membership of the Dietrich School should lead to the engagement of non-tenure stream faculty in faculty governance at the School level;

Resolved, That Section III.1, III.2, III.3, III.4, and III.7 be amended to include non-tenure stream representatives on the Dietrich School Council (three new members elected by division); non-tenure stream representatives on the Undergraduate Council (three new members elected by division); Graduate Council (redefinition of membership to be elected members of graduate faculty); Planning and Budget Committee (three new members elected by division); and Nominating Committee (three new members elected by division); all as detailed in the Attachment.

3. Whereas, The increasing and highly valued role of full-time non-tenure stream faculty in providing instruction and otherwise supporting, though student advising and other functions, the undergraduate program, warrants adoption of agreed, consistent criteria for appointment, evaluation, and reappointment of non-tenure stream Dietrich School faculty;

Resolved, That the following criteria for appointment, evaluation, and reappointment of non-tenure stream faculty be adopted by the School:

Lecturer: A full-time faculty appointment outside the tenure stream whose primary responsibility is teaching, but whose duties may include activities such as student advising, supervision of graduate student teachers, program administration, and technical or artistic support. Initial appointment is for one year, and may be renewed for up to two additional years. In the third year, a Lecturer may be recommended for subsequent renewals of three years. In the sixth year, a Lecturer may be considered for promotion to Lecturer/Master Teacher. Evaluation and recommendation for contract renewals or promotion will be by a vote of the tenured and tenure-stream faculty, and NTS faculty at the ranks of Lecturer/Master Teacher and Senior Lecturer.

Lecturer/Master Teacher: A full-time faculty appointment outside the tenure stream whose duties are the same as those of Lecturer, but who has demonstrated consistent excellence as a teacher, and, if appropriate, as an advisor, or in other assigned service to a department. Appointments are for three years, and are renewable. Evaluation and recommendation for contract renewals will be by a vote of tenured and tenure-stream faculty, and NTS faculty at the rank of Senior Lecturer. Recommendation for promotion to Senior Lecturer may be made by a vote of tenured and tenure-stream faculty, and NTS faculty at the rank of Senior Lecturer.

Senior Lecturer: A title reserved for persons of considerable professional attainment, of eminence, or with recognized expertise in their fields of scholarship or in the creative arts. Renewable appointments are for five years. Evaluation and recommendation for contract renewals will be by a vote of tenured and tenure-stream faculty.

4. Whereas, The inclusion of full-time non-tenure stream faculty as members of the Dietrich School may have implications for departmental governance, especially in departments in which such colleagues are a large fraction of the faculty;

Resolved, That the Dietrich School of Arts and Sciences Statement on Departmental Governance be amended as follows (additions are underlined):

Proposed Changes to the Dietrich School of Arts and Sciences Statement on Departmental Governance

The following principles and procedures shall be observed by all departments within the Dietrich School of Arts and Sciences. They are to be considered minimal guidelines; particular departments may elect to adopt more detailed statements of governance.

General

Chairpersons shall act in concert with their respective Faculties. They shall seek the opinion and advice of their colleagues. Chairpersons may make determinations contrary to such counsel; but, if they do so, there arises a duty to account for their reasons—both to the department and to administrative superiors. Chairpersons shall fully disclose the nature and extent of their disagreement with faculty opinion.

Chairpersons serve as representatives of their respective departmental Faculties to the administration and therefore their authority should be perceived as primarily derived from the faculty. To be effective a Chairperson must exhibit qualities of intellectual leadership, devotion to scholarship, and academic excellence and concern for growth and development of the department. Chairpersons should be ever mindful that they earn the respect of their colleagues by demonstrating these qualities of leadership and not by instilling fear or by setting department members against one another. A productive academic environment requires a Chairperson who is consistently self-controlled and who has a considerable capacity for tolerance and empathy.

Departmental Bylaws

It is essential that faculty understand how their departments operate, particularly at a University where faculty reflect varied origins, backgrounds, and educational experiences, and effective and open departmental governance structures allow faculty (and students, where appropriate) to participate fully in the decision-making process in their teaching units.

Departments are therefore required to maintain, distribute to faculty members annually, and translate into practice a set of Bylaws consistent with Dietrich School of Arts and Sciences Bylaws, University Bylaws, and University Policies and Procedures that, at a minimum, address the functions listed below:

- Recommendations to the Dean regarding Chair appointments
- Conduct of Departmental business
- Determination and staffing of undergraduate and graduate curricula and requirements
- Departmental planning and its budgetary impacts
- Departmental procedures appropriate for faculty processes and actions

Consultation on major issues

Faculty members and, when appropriate, graduate students and undergraduate majors shall be consulted on all academic issues involving the department, such as appointments, promotions, curriculum, program requirements, academic priorities, general policies concerning course and committee structures and responsibilities, and budget policy; the tenured/tenure stream faculty shall take the lead on curricular issues.

Faculty appointments and promotions

The University Bylaws state that the Dean “shall take into account the recommendations of the Chairmen of the Departments and the faculties concerned.” In recommending faculty appointments and promotions the Chairperson shall furnish the Dean with evidence concerning the extent to which members of the department favor or oppose the prospective appointee.

Accountability and term of office

Since the faculty is accountable to the Chairperson and the Dean, in turn the Chairperson shall be accountable to the Dean and to the faculty of that department. Chairpersons shall be appointed on the recommendation of the Dean for a specified maximum period of time not to exceed five years following consultation with the faculty. They are eligible for reappointment following an appropriate review. A secret ballot shall be used to determine the balance of faculty judgment in matters of appointment and reappointment of Chairpersons; a full and complete report of the faculty recommendation shall be provided to the Dean, including a distinction, if appropriate, between the views of the tenured/tenure stream and the non-tenure stream faculty.

The Dean shall be instrumental in arranging for this and other expressions of opinion and shall take these expressions under advisement; open discussions of departmental directions and challenges is encouraged. In formulating recommendations with regard to appointment and reappointment of Chairpersons, the tenured/tenure stream faculty shall take the lead.

Meetings

In each Fall and Spring Term the Chairperson shall call at least one meeting for which any member of the faculty may place an item on the agenda.

5. Whereas, The increasing complexity of composition of the Dietrich School faculty, and the addition of full-time non-tenure stream faculty to the voting faculty of the School, could lead to confusion as to appropriate academic procedures for first appointments of tenure stream and tenured faculty;

Resolved, That the Criteria and Procedures for Appointment, Reappointment, Promotion, and Conferral of Tenure be amended as follows (additions are underlined):

Proposed Changes to the Departmental Procedures Concerning First Appointment, Third-Year Review, and Promotion to Associate Professor with Tenure

1. First Appointment

The appointment of new faculty members is a matter in which the departments should exercise great care and diligence. Every member of the department should participate in the appointive process, and should have a voice in any decision; faculty have voting privileges on appointments at their own rank or below. The following considerations apply particularly to the appointment of tenure stream Instructors and Assistant Professors.

Candidates should be solicited by advertisement in appropriate journals, by extensive canvassing, and by other suitable means, in a manner consonant with applicable standards of affirmative action. The credentials of candidates thus solicited should be closely scrutinized. Candidates' potential as scholars or artists and teachers should be evaluated rigorously. The most promising candidates should be invited to meet personally with all members of the department, and to submit for examination examples of their scholarly or creative work. A seminar presentation, lecture-discussion session, or other kind of performance should be required of each such candidate, to assist department members in judging the quality of the candidate's training and potentialities as teacher and scholar.

When all candidates for a position have been fully evaluated, the Chairperson shall canvass the views of all members of the department with voting privileges at the rank of the appointment to determine whether a consensus exists favoring the appointment of one of the candidates; in the case of a tenured appointment, each tenured faculty member has a vote on the award of tenure, even if he/she does not have a vote on rank. The results of that canvass, together with the Chairperson's recommendation and all other relevant materials, shall be forwarded to the Dean for the Dean's action. The Chairperson's recommendation should provide a detailed rationale for the proposed appointment, including the anticipated contribution of the prospective appointee to the short- and long-term plans of the department.
